Course Description and Aims

This study will serve as a basic introduction to the academic field of Religion as it employs major categories of the discipline with which to better penetrate and analyze the specific religious traditions that are our foci, three major religious and philosophical traditions: Buddhism, Islam, and Native American Traditions. The class will focus upon the traditions' key historical developments and diverse, contemporary forms. The course will begin with an exploration of Native American thought and religious traditions and will continue with Buddhist and Islamic traditions. Any study of cultural traditions has as an aim an understanding of the basic assumptions and practices of different peoples. A fundamental aim of this course is also an informed appreciation of and respect for the diverse traditions studied. Of particular use will be these comparative religious studies topics: Concepts of the Divine or Ultimate Reality, Ethics, Ritual, Cosmogony, Anthropology, Eschatology, Soteriology and Theodicy. The discipline of comparative religious studies is not a means to evaluate traditions for worth, but a scholarly means of determining patterns, commonalities and differences between religious practices, beliefs, and traditions in general while recognizing the unique characteristics of and pluralities within each religion of the world. Students will also be encouraged to reflect analytically upon the methodologies and scholarly categories within the course. We will question the very categories of comparative religious studies, identify possible cultural biases in the discipline's vernacular, and hopefully achieve a de-centered, new understanding of how "religion" can be defined.

Course Requirements and Grading

You do not need to have any prior experience with the academic study of religion to take this class. However, I do expect you to work hard, and to contribute to class discussions. If you are not comfortable with the expectations for reading and writing in this class, you should consider taking another class instead. You are expected to keep up with all reading assignments. If you have not done the readings, it will simply be impossible for you to participate in the discussion. While we will suffer from that, the main damage will be done to your own learning and your participation grade. This equally applies to the amount of writing expected of you. One's final grade will be calculated according to the following:

Attendance and Participation	10%
Test I	10%
Test II	10%
Test III	10%
Research/Site Visit/Interview Paper	20%
2 Reflection Papers	20% (10% each)
Final Exam	20%

Plus and minus grades may be given on individual assignments and final grades.

Attendance and Participation including Student Notes and Presentation

Attendance and Participation: You must be present for class meetings in order to do well in the course. Assigned readings will be supplemented by in-class lectures, discussions, exercises, and more. You are allowed to be absent from a total of three (3) class sessions. With every additional absence your final grade for this class will go down 5%. If you have a valid excuse for missing a class session, please bring the excuse for evaluation. Also, if you must miss class due to a religious holiday, plan ahead with your allowance of three absences, and tell me at the very beginning of the semester. Class participation is part of the learning process. As it is also part of the final grade, there will be ample opportunity for it over the course of the semester. Apart from the lectures you will be involved in activities such as class discussion, group work with subsequent presentations, peer reviews and in-class writing. Keep up with all readings and assignments, and get the notes for missed class sessions from your peers. While I will call on you often and ask about the content of assigned readings, you are strongly encouraged to ask questions and suggest topics for discussion in class on your own.

If a disability requires special circumstances for you in the classroom, taking notes, or taking tests or exams, please see Disability Services on campus for proper aid. Those students needing help with writing, English, or research, please go to the Writing Center run by Dr. Adrian Ivey or the ESL program headed by Dr. Stacy Bell.

Student Minutes and Presentation: Taking minutes/notes on lectures and class discussion is a critical part of your learning experience. You are all expected to take notes during class as you will have to draw on them for your own work as well as when preparing for the tests. Your notes will also be the basis for a brief five-minute presentation that each of you is to give in class as part of your participation grade. Every day our meetings will start with one of you presenting on the previous class session. Here you will draw on your minutes/notes to give a brief summary of the main points discussed in the previous class as well as an outlook on unresolved issues and open questions which need further address. Be concise as you only have five minutes of talking time. Your peers will have a chance to comment on the accuracy of your notes and presentation and make suggestions for improvement. I will circulate a list with available dates for presentations at the beginning of the semester.

Reflection Papers

This short paper (3-4 pages) is meant as a free reflection opportunity. The student will reflect in a thoughtful, mature, informed, and scholarly manner on any topic of lecture, class discussion, or reading assignment. The paper is an outlet for one's thoughts on any topic relating to the course. The reflection papers will be graded based upon evidence of understanding and sensitive, informed level of engagement with the material. The first reflection paper is due in class on October 11. The second may be turned in any time before the final exam date.

Three Tests and the Final Exam

There will be three tests over the course of the semester. The tests will cover both the reading assignments and in-class material. Each test will consist of two parts, a short identification section and an essay section. Choices of questions will be provided. The first test will cover the material from the introductory sessions up to and including our discussion of Native American traditions. For the second test you will be expected to demonstrate your knowledge of Buddhist traditions. The third test will cover Islam. You will also have one Final Examination in the final exam week. The exam is cumulative and will test your skills in using the vernacular of comparative religious studies. In preparation for it you will have to look back at the entire semester and reflect on the material, including Native American, Buddhist and Islamic traditions, in a comparative, scholarly manner. You may also be asked to reflect critically upon the categories and methodologies we employed in class. Final exam date and time may not be changed.

Research/Site Visit/Interview Paper

One paper on a topic of the student's choice is also required. This paper should be between 10 and 12 pages long, typed, double-spaced (use 12pt font and one-inch margins). The paper due date is December 11 in class. Late papers will be penalized. Any topic, tradition, or text relating to our course is permissible. Please see me for approval of your topic and for help in finding sources before the fall break (see course schedule). You have much freedom regarding this assignment. You may write a research paper without interview or site visit descriptions, a paper on a site visit that incorporates research work, or an interview/s-centered paper that incorporates research. As this is a research paper at foundation, citations and a list of references are required. Encouraged are reports on site visits to a service or meeting in a religion other than one's own.

Please note again that Site Visit or Interview Papers must also show preparedness in research; in other words, your paper must not only be descriptive or simply transcribe an interview. It must be meaningfully explanatory, as well. Please see the professor not only for approval of your topic but also for help in finding resources. The paper should exhibit your applied knowledge of approaches and intellectual grasp of the material at hand. Of greatest importance is that you choose a topic that interests you. Plagiarism is easy to spot, and harshly penalized by the University. Don't be afraid to trust your own words and scholarly analyses.

You have the option of turning in a rough draft of your paper to be read and helpfully critiqued by your professor. Such a rough draft review with useful suggestions for improvements allows you to revise your paper before turning in the final draft that will be graded. If you choose this optional help, the rough draft due date is November 27. Please remember that your professor is available to help you at any time in the semester. If my office hours are not convenient for you, please make an appointment or email me.

Online Tools

This course will use the communication tools online at Emory University as well as readings and documents located there. To use LearnLink you only need to have an Emory email account. You should update your profile so you will be able to receive relevant emails. Grades will be posted online as will be some helpful Internet links. You would do well to get acquainted with some of the web pages, and use them as a frequent point of entry and exploration around many of the issues we will be discussing.

Academic Honesty

Finally, all students deserve an atmosphere of fairness, honesty and maturity. All of us at Oxford College live by the standards set forth in the Honor Code (pages 49-51 in the Oxford College Catalog), which includes the "responsibility for maintaining standards of unimpeachable honesty in all academic work" (p.49). The Honor Code also indicates that we cannot tolerate actions in others that violate this code, so we (and you) are obligated to report violations. Oxford College takes this honor code very seriously, as do I, and penalties for violations are severe. Please read the Honor Code carefully.
