Chapter assignments are listed on a separate page.

COURSE CONTENT:

1. This course will introduce "Prehistoric Archaeology" beginning with a discussion of the types of archaeology in practice today. A brief history of the discipline will be presented as well as summaries of certain field and analytical techniques.
2. The major emphasis of the course will be the study of human prehistory. Included in the topics of discussion are human origins, the peopling of the New World, hunters-and-gatherers, plant and animal domestication, the development of complex societies, and the decline of ancient civilizations.
3. Among the ancient cultures examined in the class are Paleo-Indians of the New World, the Shang of China, the Anasazi of the American Southwest, the Maya and Aztecs of Mesoamerica, and the Inca of Peru. Class lectures and readings will be supplemented by guest lectures, demonstrations/hands-on experience, and films/slides where appropriate (some of this within the lab setting).
4. A schedule of planned topics is presented on a separate page (below). This serves primarily as a guide to the order of topics. The actual amount of time spent on a particular issue or culture will vary according to the needs of the class. Given the available time near the semester's end, we may discuss a case or two of “fantastic” archaeology (for example, the story of Atlantis or the “evidence” for extra-terrestrial presence/influence in ancient times, etc.).

COURSE GRADING: Evaluation in this course will be through five tests. Five (5) tests are administered and please note that there are NO MAKE-UPS since the lowest grade will be dropped. The top four (4) scores are averaged to equal 90% of your grade. IF special circumstances require a “make-up” test, the new test will be evaluated with an automatic 10 point reduction. The 10% balance of the course grade is based upon participation in the lab component section. The lab component may be hands-on activities as well as films, etc. There are NO MAKE-UP Lab classes. If you miss three (3) or more lab sessions, you automatically receive a “F” for the lab component. An “F” for the lab component also means an “F” for the course, regardless of your class average.

Tests are multiple choice, true-false, and fill-in-the-blank. The tests are not cumulative, there is no “final exam” for this course. When tests are returned, any questions or need of modification to the evaluation must be done within two class meetings of the returned test. Test results will not be reevaluated at the end of the semester. Any questions, confusion about the course grading, etc. should be clarified/settled with Prof. Valdez as soon as possible.

This course carries the Global Cultures flag. Global Cultures courses are designed to increase your familiarity with cultural groups outside the United States. You should therefore expect a substantial portion of your grade to come from assignments covering the practices, beliefs, and histories of at least one non-U.S. cultural group, past or present.
