Course Overview

How do we understand and study the second decade of life? Is adolescence a period of storm and stress? Is it a period of smooth transition from childhood to adulthood? The concept of adolescence as we know it today came into being around the turn of the twentieth century, and since that time, adolescence has been studied extensively by psychologists, anthropologists, sociologists, neuroscientists, and many others. In this course, we will investigate the important changes that occur biologically, cognitively, emotionally, and socially from approximately ages 10 to 20. In studying these changes, we will consider how they are affected by the contexts in which adolescents live—families, schools, peers and friends, cultural contexts—and we will focus primarily on a developmental psychology perspective on adolescence. Specifically, we will study how empirical research in psychology can help us ask and answer questions about adolescence. In addition, we will consider how that research informs our understanding of more applied questions, including questions about adolescent risk taking, bullying prevention, media influences, and others.

Required Texts

- Steinberg, L. (2017). Adolescence (11th ed.). New York: McGraw Hill.
- Palacio, R. J. (2012). Wonder. New York: Knopf.
- Articles and additional readings available on reserve.

Class Attendance

Class attendance is particularly important for this course because of the emphasis on in-class work and discussion. Therefore, attendance is mandatory. If you need to miss class because of an illness or emergency, you are responsible for obtaining class notes, handouts, announcements, etc. Please note that it is impossible to receive credit for class participation if you are absent, and your participation grade will be adversely affected by more than two absences. As soon as possible, please inform me of any religious holidays or approved Oxford athletic or other commitments that might require you to miss class so that alternative arrangements for completing work can be made at the earliest opportunity.

Honor Code

All work submitted for evaluation in this course assumes adherence to the honor code of Oxford College. Unless instructed otherwise, all of your work in this course should represent completely independent effort. No part of your tests or papers completed for this course may be shared with other students in this class or with students in future classes. In addition, you may not refer to tests, papers, or assignments from previous classes. The Oxford College Honor Code can be found here: <http://oxford.emory.edu/academics/student-services/student-honor-code/>

Evaluation

Evaluation of your performance in this course will be based on various tests, papers, and other assignments. Each component is described in greater detail below.

Letter grades will be assigned based on the following scale:

A = 100-93 A- = 92-90 B+ = 89-87 B = 86-83 B- = 82-80 C+ = 79-77
C = 76-73 C- = 72-70 D+ = 69-67 D = 66-63 D- = 62-60 F = 59-0

Assignment	Percentage of Grade	Date Due
Test 1	20%	Monday, September 26
Test 2	20%	Friday, October 28
Test 3	20%	Monday, December 12
Analysis Paper 1	15%	Friday, September 16
Analysis Paper 2	15%	Monday, November 14
Class participation and leading discussion	10%	Every day

Assignments will be penalized one full letter grade (e.g., A- to B-, C to D) for each part or whole day the assignment is late. No extension or make-up option is available for class discussion.

Access, Disability Services and Resources (ADSR) works with students who have disabilities to provide reasonable accommodations. In order to receive consideration for reasonable accommodations, students must contact ADSR and complete the registration process. Faculty may not provide disability accommodations until an accommodation letter has been processed; accommodations are not retroactive. Students registered with ADSR who receive a letter outlining specific academic accommodations are strongly encouraged to coordinate a meeting time with their professor to discuss a protocol to implement the accommodations as needed throughout the semester. This meeting should occur as early in the semester as possible. Contact ADSR for more information at 770-784-4690 or adsroxford@emory.edu. Additional information is available at the ADSR website at <http://equityandinclusion.emory.edu/access/students/index.html>.

Tests

There will be three tests in this course. The first two tests will be taken in class on September 26 and October 28. The third test will be taken during the scheduled final exam time for our class on December 12. Test and exam questions will be drawn both from your readings and from material covered in class and will emphasize the synthesis and application of your knowledge about adolescence. Only under extraordinary circumstances will a make-up exam be administered. It is your responsibility to make all arrangements for the make-up exam before the start of the regularly scheduled exam.

Analysis Papers

You will be assigned two short analysis papers. For the first paper, you will choose examples of adolescence in popular culture, and for the second paper, you will watch a movie. For each paper, your task is to analyze the material/movie in the context of the research you've read for class. Specifically, you will write about ways in which the portrayal of adolescence is both consistent with and not consistent with the research and theory you've read and discussed in class. Your papers presenting your analysis are due in class on September 16 and November 14. More information about these assignments will be given approximately two weeks before the due dates.

Class Participation and Leading Discussion

Participation in Class Discussion

The format of this class requires that the assigned readings be completed before the date they will be covered in class. I expect you to be thoroughly engaged with the material, your colleagues, and me for the full 65 minutes of each class session. Your contribution to the class activities and discussion is viewed as an essential component of your own learning process in this course as well as that of your classmates. Everyone is expected to participate at every class meeting. If you are hesitant about speaking up in class, talk to me about it without delay, and I will help you get started. Remember that the quality of your contributions is more important than the quantity. Your contributions to class meetings will be scored as follows:

- ++ Outstanding contributions (comments, questions, and responses to others show careful critical analysis of material)
- + Good contributions (comments, questions, and responses move the discussion forward)
- Neutral contributions (comments, etc. do not move the discussion forward) or minimal contributions
- — Listening attentively but no contributions
- 0 Not engaged or absent

Facilitating Class Discussion

On specific days throughout the semester, class will be led by a team of discussion leaders. The task of the leaders is to facilitate discussion of the readings assigned for that day. Once during the semester, you will work with several partners to serve in this role. When you are a discussion leader, the class session is yours to organize and plan, so be creative! Remember that your goal is to facilitate discussion with your classmates and not to complete a class presentation. Your grade for this component of the course will be based on the following: overall clarity, contribution to colleagues' understanding of the material, grasp of material and ability to answer questions, facilitation of discussion, teamwork, completeness, placing the material in the context of other course readings, effective style of speaking, and creativity. You and your partners are strongly encouraged to meet with me to talk about your plans for facilitating discussion before your scheduled discussion day.

Additional Resources

There are numerous resources available to you on campus. Below I've listed a few that might be helpful to you. If you do not see a relevant resource below, please see me, and I will do my best to help connect you to the right person/place.

Advising Support Center (ASC)

The Advising Support Center is a great first stop for students who have general academic questions or concerns. The ASC can help you access all of the appropriate resources on campus. Stop by the first floor of Seney Hall or email oxadvising@emory.edu for more information. "Just ASC!"

The Writing Center

The Writing Center is committed to helping all Oxford students succeed as clear, effective communicators. Peer writing consultants can help you refine your writing by reviewing a paper's focus, development, organization, clarity, grammar, source integration, or other aspects. For more information, visit <http://oxford.emory.edu/academics/centers-institutes-programs/writing-center/> or schedule an appointment online at <https://oxford.mywconline.com>.

Counseling Center

Many students visit the Counseling Center at some point during their Oxford careers. Counselors are available to talk with you about any difficulties that might be limiting your intellectual, emotional, or social development. Their services are confidential and highly professional. See <http://oxford.emory.edu/life-at-oxford/counseling-and-career-services/> for more information. You can schedule an appointment by calling 770-784-8394.

Access, Disability Services and Resources

This office is helpful to students with particular learning needs who may need accommodations based on the impact of a disability. For more information, contact ADSR at 770-784-4690 or adsroxford@emory.edu or see <http://equityandinclusion.emory.edu/access/students/index.html>.

Career Services

It's never too early to start thinking about and preparing for your time after Emory! The Career Services Center is available to help you explore opportunities during your time at Oxford (e.g., internships) as well as to help you think about the future. See <http://www.oxford.emory.edu/life-at-oxford/counseling-and-career-services/career-services/>.

Let's Meet for Coffee

I am eager to get to know you and have a chance to learn more about your interests, your goals, and who you are outside of our regularly scheduled class meetings. To that end, I invite you to join me for coffee (or my personal favorite...chai teal) at Lil's or somewhere else on campus some time this semester. This is not a requirement, but I hope you will take me up on the offer—just let me know a time we could meet.
