The purpose of this blog is to combine environmental/animal protection and Chinese language learning. The content within this blog includes an E-Book, Student Projects, and Podcasts.

Course Description and Objectives

Building upon the language and cultural knowledge you have acquired in Chn 201, this course aims to further develop your communicative skills in culturally appropriate contexts. The course will reinforce important linguistic structures and usage to build and refine your understanding of Chinese vocabulary and linguistic patterns. It will also gradually introduce more formal speech and written-style language. The objective is to develop the ability to comprehend and produce more formal and paragraph-level Chinese. Through a variety of cultural topics set in contemporary China and lesson-based communicative tasks, you will practice a broad range of written and verbal communicative skills and build cultural understanding.

Blackboard, LearnLink, and the Language Lab

We will use Blackboard (classes.emory.edu) regularly to post course-related material, including:

- This syllabus
- Information about class sessions and teachers
- Detailed lesson plans
- Access to audio material for the textbook and the workbook
- Supplementary course materials
- Links to additional learning resources

LearnLink conference for Chn 202 will mainly be used for communications and announcements. Make sure you can access it.

* It will be very helpful if you can practice Chinese with native speakers after your classes. You will receive 2 extra credits for your bi-lesson written test if you practice Chinese with the tutors for 30 minutes or more each week.

Course Structure and Expectations

This course is structured into several three-week units. In each three-week unit, new lessons are introduced in the first two weeks. The third week will focus on 1) reviewing language functions and cultural contents of the two lessons, 2) expanding the scope and depth of the linguistic and cultural information through supplementary reading or audio/visual materials, and 3) conducting oral and written tests.

1. Attendance and Participation

Attend class regularly and punctually. You are allowed four penalty-free absences regardless of reason through the semester. Beyond that, the fifth to seventh additional absences will, regardless of reason, lower your final grade by one rank, e.g. from A to A-. Please save allowed absences for unexpected illnesses and emergencies!

Prepare for each class session in advance. Daily preparation includes 1) learning new vocabulary and characters; and 2) reading the texts and being able to ask questions about the new lesson.

Actively participate in class activities. You will receive a participation grade for each lesson based on your daily performance in class.

2. Quizzes

There are four quizzes for each lesson. Quizzes will be given at the beginning of the class. Students must attend the class session in order to take the quiz and receive credits. No make-up quizzes will be given under any circumstances. The four lowest scores (including zero) will be dropped.

3. Text-reading – Reading Fluency Assessment

In the textbook, reading passages are not accompanied by Pinyin. You must learn to not only recognize and understand the characters/words but also pronounce them without any phonetic help. This seemingly simple task of establishing sound-symbol correlation actually requires regular and repeated practice. This course stresses the importance of reading fluency by conducting text-reading assessment during the third week of each unit. Students will be asked to read the lesson texts. Assessments of reading fluency are determined by reading accuracy, speed, and appropriate prosody (stress, intonation, etc.)

4. Bi-lesson Tests and the Final Exam

Bi-lesson tests will be given during the third week of each unit. You can miss a lesson test only because of family emergency or medical reasons; also you should inform your instructor immediately and make up the test within three days.

5. Assignments and Compositions

Homework from the Workbook will be assigned regularly and must be submitted on time. Late assignments submitted within one day after the due date will receive 50% of the grade. No assignments will be accepted beyond one day and will be recorded as zero.

You will complete short composition (400-600 characters) at the end of each lesson. The composition will be a written summary the information exchanged in spoken practices and communicative tasks.

6. Final Project

Detailed information will be given during the second half of the semester.
