About this class: The purpose of the course is to introduce the student to the field of personality theory. Three major components will be explored. First, the student will become familiar with important issues in the field. Second, the student will review the major theoretical conceptions of personality that serve as the foundation of the field. Third, the student will critique these theories/perspectives in terms of their strengths and weaknesses and their applicability to the "real" lives of human beings!

There are several distinctive features to this class:

- 1. In-class dialogue, discussion, and collaboration will be significant components. While I will lecture on a regular basis, I will also expect you to take much of the leadership and ownership of the class. You have important ideas to share!! You will also collaborate with other students. This means that you will facilitate a class discussion with other students and work on a group project with one another. If you are opposed to group work, this is not the class for you.
- 2. Psychology 330 is an upper divisional course. You are certainly welcome to take this course if you are not a psychology major (provided, of course, that you have had the prerequisite of Psychology 100), but you should realize that I will assume that you are serious about the study of psychology and are specifically interested in the goals and subject matter of the course.
- 3. The class is writing intensive and satisfies the sophomore writing requirement. However, this does not mean that you must be a gifted writer to do well. It does mean that you will be writing and revising on a consistent basis and that you will need to devote time and effort to the writing and revision processes. You will also be reviewing one another's paper. Therefore, your ability to help your classmates via constructive written criticism will contribute to your grade.
- 4. Only original works will be used in this course. This means that you will not have a Theories of Personality text book. You will have available to you the actual works written by the original author. For example, rather than read about Freud or read an interpretation of Freud (as you might in a Psychology text book), you will actually read Freud! The same is true for all of the personality theorists studied this semester. This is challenging for most of us since personality theorists can be obtuse and complex at times; therefore, you will need to be prepared for this challenge as well as for the pure joy of reading a theorist's actual words.

Course Objectives: By the end of this course you should be better able to:

- 1. Understand and use psychological ideas, principles, theories, and concepts to interpret human behavior
- 2. Communicate more effectively in writing and use writing as a way to understand the subject matter of the course
- 3. Appraise your own learning, thinking, and ideas
- 4. Grow in heart and mind. This means that we will make a conscious attempt to develop a tolerance and appreciation of others' ideas and convictions, particularly those views that are different from our own
- 5. Enjoy this moment in time in our own journey of learning

Texts: There will be no textbook used in this class. Selected readings will be placed on reserve in the library.

Requirements of the course:

(Guidelines for each of these assignments will be posted to our Blackboard site)

- 1. Response papers (40%)
- 2. Group Film Analysis (25%)
- 3. Psychobiography (25%)
- 4. Attendance and Participation: (10%)

The plus-minus system of grading will be used in the calculation of final grades.

The student Honor Code of Oxford College applies to every member of the class. Please review this code carefully giving special attention to plagiarism. Remember that plagiarism occurs when one uses the words and ideas of another person without quotations and without adequate referencing. PLEASE NOTE ALSO THAT THE USE OF FORMER STUDENTS' PAPERS MAY NOT BE USED IN ANY FORM; TO DO SO IS TO VIOLATE THE HONOR CODE!! Should you have any questions about what constitutes plagiarism, please consult with me.

*Please, no cell phones in the classroom! They are discourteous and interrupt the integrity of our learning experience. If I see or hear a cell phone in this classroom, I will ask you to leave.
